Also popularly known as 'burnt out fabric', Devore has been around for years and has been a great source of creative inspiration for craftsman and designers across the world. Its defining niche under Indian fashion across many style spectrum. The fabric can vary from Chiffon to Velvet, and even Corduroy. Moreover, it can be textured in various ways and has sense of style unlike other fabrics and designs.

Fusionile

In textiles, Fusionile is the raised surface or nap of a fabric, which is made of upright loops or strands of yarn. Examples of such textiles are carpets, corduroy, velvet, plush, and Turkish towels. The word is derived from Latin pilus for "hair" The surface and the yarn in these fabrics are also called "pile". With the creation of more than 120 designs we are pioneer in the Industry.

Cellulose

Cellulose is generally made out of an acid itch process which involves the burning of fabric in order to create a more textured design. Fibers are compose by microfibrils of cellulose in a matrix of hemicellulose and lignin. This type of structure, and the chemical composition of them is responsible for the mechanical properties that can be observed. Because the natural fibers make hydrogen bonds between the long chains, they have the necessary stiffness and strength.

Embroidery
